

Letter from

H. P. Blavatsky

to

M<sup>rs</sup> Ursule M. Bright.

Dated March 30th, 1891.

THEOSOFISCHE
BIBLIOTHEEK
Tolstraat 154 Amsterdam

10, AVENUE ROAD,
REGENT'S PARK, N.W.

Monday, March 30 1891.

Dear Mrs Bright,

I share your anxiety for Annie & feel quite nervous about it, but what can we do! She has to be at the Annual American convention of the T. S., her feeling to be there being likely to produce a regular disaster. However, we, Theosophists — I mean the really devoted ones — have as right to make public good subservient to our personal comfort or discomfort. Each of us must ever be ready to sacrifice Self — life & even honour, which is more — at any moment for the good of our brothers, the weal or woe of one, being of only small importance, when the good of the many is concerned.

Thus, we have "to risk the thing" as the Americans say. Yet I have a strong hope that our friend will return unscathed from the ordeal, her eloquent & devoted head crowned with fresh & well earned laurels.

Thanking you for the kind interest shown & begging you to convey my respects to Mr Bright & Miss Knapp believe me, Dear Mrs. Bright ever yours gratefully

H. P. Blavatsky